This half mile stretch of coast at Long Island Sound in New London, Connecticut, is an impressive array of on-site activities families enjoy, and the boardwalk is alive, showing a busy schedule of summer events that will wipe you back to simpler times. Don't balk at the cost of admission: $17 on weekdays, $23 on weekends for a carload of up to five people. It's a small price for access to play-all-day fun with views of the soothing, shimmering water and, in the distance, the New London Ledge Light: one of the prettiest lighthouses in New England. Keep in mind, too, that admission is free in the season, when a walk to the beach can still be energizing and rejuvenating. One thing is about the coast: You will never be bored at Ocean Beach Park. Swimming in floating water and building castles of sweet sand, of course, the beach's main attractions. But here is much more to inhabit families with children of all ages. As you enter the parking lot, you'll see towering Triple Waterslides and petite Kiddie Land attractions where tots love carousel, train and other nostalgic rides, and teens head straight to the scrambler. One of the unique things on this beach is that it is also home to an Olympic-sized outdoor pool. For a small extra entrance fee, you can enjoy a pool day on the beach. It's best of all worlds if some of your family members don't relish swimming in saltwater. Children eight years old and younger can also cool off at the free Spray Park. Don't worry, adults: There's a lot to bring you here, too. More than a dozen volleyball nets stand along the sand. And there's even a Renegade health club on the beach where a $12 day pass allows you to work with sea views. The 18-hole, sea-themed miniature golf course with water-spouting whale is entertaining for all ages, as is the arcade, with a wild variety of antique and state-of-the-art games to play. Collect tickets to redeem prizes. When summer is rocking and rolling, Ocean Beach Park also hosts special events almost every night of the week. Mondays are Classic Car Cruise Nights, where you could spot a dreamy Corvette or an intriguing DeLorean. Tuesdays are Beach Blanket Movie Nights. The calendar also includes concerts, children's shows, dances and fireworks. You do not leave the beach tasty eats. For a quick bite, head over to Denny's Sand Castle: a fine-only snack bar right on the sand. Their burgers, hot dogs, chicken nuggets, and potatoes will tide you over until you're ready for a sit-down meal. The indoor outdoor Sandbar Cafe is located on a high deck overlooking the magnificent beach scene: Request a rooftop table if you can (but guard your food carefully, or crisp gulls will have a freeload). The café cooks up a varied menu of apps, salads, sandwiches, and seafood entrees (try scallop and bacon pizza), and the full bar offers a line-up of frozen fudge and beer list that includes some Connecticut-brewed choices for tap. Ocean Beach Park is also home to Boardwalk Creamery, where you can treat children to carnival-style treats such as popcorn and cotton candy, although ice cream is, of course, their specialty. If you find you're still starving (and salty air will do,so!) when you leave the beach, New London is home to one of Connecticut's best lobster shacks: Captain Scott's Lobster Dock. Just 3 miles from Ocean Beach Park, it's your place for local favorites like clam fritters and hot buttered lobster rolls. First settled by English settlers in 1646 and chartered as a city in 1784, New London is a place to explore centuries of history sights such as the Custom House Maritime Museum and Fort Trumbull State Park, where you can tour 19th century fortifications and learn about Connecticut's military innovation. New London is also a destination for lighthouse lovers who can see eight historic lighthouses aboard Cross Sound Ferry's excellent Classic Lighthouse Cruise. Thanks for letting us know! To know!
